PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE Tonnie Adams

We had an early taste of summer this week, but one of the berries is ready to bloom, so cool weather won't be too far behind. It seemed like my greatgrandmother Adams had a different berry for each cool spell we would have in the spring, whether it was blackberry or chinaberry. Our ancestors had to adjust to the different farming conditions in the South, and as they migrated west, learned new ways of cultivating crops to maximize their yield. Their determination to mold and shape the land to make a living has been passed down through the generations. I suppose we all come from good genes!

Warmer weather also means that the Gladneys in America Reunion is not far away. If you have not reserved your room

POSSIBLE SECOND GLADNEY CEMETERY IN WINNSBORO

This is an email that was received from Pelham Lyles of the Fairfield County Museum in Winnsboro, SC on February 11, 2016 in reference to a possible second Gladney Cemetery very near the location of the present known Gladney Cemetery in Winnsboro. Just a reminder that we had requested permission to try to find the second cemetery in hopes that it would indeed contain additional Gladney graves. We did get permission but, we were advised to wait until after hunting season for our own safety.

Jon Davis of our (the museum's) cemetery committee finally got a call in with Buddy Stevenson and he was willing to let Jon and Green into his property to look at the cemetery we have been seeking, thinking it might be a Gladney site. As you can see here, the cemetery is a Milling one, but mixed with other Jackson Creek area names. I think the opportunity presented itself and Jon did not have time to let me know they were going in, so he brought these images back today, along with GPS coordinates, etc. Buddy took them in a small distance in a truck and they walked in the last part of the mile.

As you can see, the cemetery is down low on the flood plain, which is somewhat unusual. However, we recently located the long missing Winn cemetery on Little River, just beside Bell's/Winn's bridge on the Newberry Highway #34. See images here. It is also very low down, but as topographical maps show, it must have once been on the side of a higher bluff which has been cut under by migrating courses of the stream there. I include my findings on locating the site of Gen. John Buchanan's stone house on Jackson Creek near the old Hillcrest School road. The Timms family story is that Jackson Creek was a flood plan which accounts for the break in the Old Harden Road where it used to cross Jackson C. and connect up to Hillcrest School near Highway 213.

Enjoy John's pictures!

-Pelham

NOTE: Please do not contact Buddy to visit the cemetery. We will request a visit as a group at the next reunion.

OK. So Rufus Timms came in yesterday and his family owns the property where the stone house ruins are See attached pix--I found my pictures of it from when Val and I saw it. There is a large mortar stone in front of the house. Rufus said his grandfather related that they fed the chickens in it! He said his grandfather bought property in 1897 from the Ketchins. His grandfather was David Yongue Timms. In 1941, when the US Army was staging troop maneuvers in airfield and surrounding counties, they paid his grandmother to destroy the building and use the stones to cross Jackson Creek. A family tradition told them by the Ketchins was that the house had been built by slaves, that each individual stone was brought from the quarry on foot, rolling and flipping them as they pushed them along!

Then I scanned the pages from the Sketchbook AND REREAD THEM AF-TER SOME YEARS! BINGO! It says right there that the house was the original Buchanan house. However, I did not trace the deeds to see if the house is the same from Buchanan through Harden, then Ketchin, then Timms. Also, my preliminary search indicated the ruins were Buchanan, but I did not do a thorough search. A friend, Richard Bailey, has done some fascinating work sleuthing the history of the house in Winnsboro that he bought and its residing families. He said that soon he will have some time and can help us in tracking the deeds, etc. to see if this ruin is one and the same.

OOPS! The story about the stones was about making the wall around the garden, not the house—the house had been standing for some generations already, if our hunch is true.

See below: Letter to Bill McCrary who owns the property on Clark's Bridge Rd. where Capt. Buchanan's mill was located on Little River. He has located the ruins.

Bill,

Map Quest shows the approximate location of the house ruin. The topo shows the hilltop where I think I remember the house to be. If you follow the traces of the "Hillcrest School Rd." NW and across Jackson Creek, you can connect the ridges to see where Old Harden Rd. used to cross. I wonder if that is where the stones from the house bridged the creek? I understand the creek bottom is very swampy and nebulous now and has moved around quite a bit.

n the 1970 highway/historical site map, I have traced what I believe to be the former route of Harden Rd. from Hillcrest school over the creek to present Harden road. I think it may have picked up for a short distance on present day #34 going over Little River at Bell's Bridge, then followed the ridge north of #34 as Possum Branch Rd. As Possum Branch comes into Rd. #346 it crosses over Rd. 18 (Ashford Ferry Rd.) and that little connector over to #215 is still called Harden Rd. Then, I think the route followed the ridge of #31 westward down to Blair where the original crossing of the river used to be. The ferry photo shows the Blair Ferry which was apparently used to cross there until the early 20th C.

The route, as I trace it, would likely have been called the Winnsborough Rd. in old plats. I think the Harden family came a little later into the area after the Rev. War. There was still standing, when I was a teen, an 1830-1850 raised cottage on Harden Road that was the home place for the Hardens of the mid century. It was taken down sometime in the 1970s and Buddy Stevenson said that his father Ed used some of the wood in his house on the hill in the sharp curve of #34 just west of Lebanon church.

The site I mentioned for my recent discovery of Jonathan (and wife) Harrison's grave, 1755- 1851, is off Clark's Bridge Rd. after you cross Little River on the cut-over area you mentioned. See attached topo map... (map not included)

I hope this inspires you to find some more archaeological points to help document our history. I would love to see where the mill you mentioned is located and any pictures of remnants, if there are any.

STRANGERS IN THE BOX

Come, look with me inside this drawer, In this box I've often seen, At the pictures, black and white, Faces proud, still, and serene.

I wish I knew the people These strangers in the box, Their names and all their memories, Are lost among my socks.

I wonder what their lives were like, How did they spend their days? What about their special times? I'll never know their ways.

If only someone had taken time, To tell, who, what, where, and when, These faces of my heritage, Would come to life again.

Could this become the fate, Of the pictures we take today? The faces and the memories, Someday to be passed away?

Take time to save your stories, Seize the opportunity when it knocks, Or someday you and yours, Could be strangers in the box.

RECIPE

I have found an awesome recipe. I admit, I found it on Facebook. But, I tried it and we both love it. It's not for the avid dieter but, every now and then, you just have to EAT.

TORTILLINI SOUP

bag of dried or frozen tortellini small bag of fresh spinach cans of Italian style diced tomatoes box or 4 cups of chicken or vegetable broth

1 block of cream cheese (softened) Optional: One pound of browned sausage, drained

Put all ingredients in crock pot. Cook on low for 5-6 hours

NOTE: I tried cooking the soup all together like this but, the cream cheese curdled. It works better if you cook the soup without the cream cheese and when the soup is done, remove some of the hot liquid and carefully whisk with softened cream cheese. Put cream cheese mixture into the soup and whisk carefully.

These prices are good for Thursday through Saturday nights (7/28-7/30/16). Check in is after 3:00p.m. and check out is 11:00a.m. Prices good through JUNE 23.

Several family outings are planned as well as a wonderful meal on Saturday evening. First, on Friday afternoon, we will all visit by bus with a guide two-three active horse farms. Then that evening there will be a family reception in the hotel lobby from around 4:00 until 9:00pm. Snacks will be served. Then, on Saturday morning, we will travel by bus with a guide to a whiskey distillery (over 21 only for this part). The day will end with our annual business meeting, guest speaker, and Banquet. After the meal, while parents are listening to the speaker, free babysitting for children ages 5-11 years will be hosted in the hotel by neighbors of our host. There will also be activities for the teenager, too.

If you happen to arrive early to the area, horseback riding is available (on your own) at a nearby park.

Wally says, that "the caterer has been hired, we can change to increase quantity of people as late as July 15th. The food line will have 2 meats (ham and chicken), three vegetables (potatoes, green beans, plus), salad, dessert, and bread with ice tea and lemonade".

The hotel will furnish eight place round tables for sit down dinner for up to one hundred people.

We plan to show the movie in same room during week end "Blossoms in The Dust" featuring Greer Garson as Mrs. Edna Gladney of Fort Worth, TX.

Cathy's Corner

My mother's baby sister, Aunt Maureen, is lived in the mill village. They were the resithe only sibling left on my mother's side, the dents of the Christian Youth Camp that was Gladney side. Aunt Maureen is in assisted here in Newnan. When my mother would living and just celebrated a birthday.

My cousin called to ask if I would like to join them for lunch. I arrived at the restaurant a little early and saw them when they drove up. My aunt emerged from the car looking all around. From inside the car, I heard my cousin say, "There she is. She's here." She was looking for me.

Growing up, Aunt Maureen and her family lived on the next block over from us in the mill village. My cousin and I spent many nights in each other's company. Spend-thenight parties they called them back then. We'd play touch football or catch or chase. Whatever crossed our minds at the time.

Then, they moved to the other side of town. You would think that isn't that far away, especially in a small town. But, to small children, it's halfway around the world.

Their new house was modern and cool looking (mid century modern), while we still lived in the mill village. They were the residents of the Christian Youth Camp that was here in Newnan. When my mother would take me there to spend the night, we now got to stay in the cabins and sleep on bunks and play the piano in the mess hall. The distance between our homes didn't seem to matter any more.

That old mill village house is still there. Although it is painted some garish color, it still holds the same memories of spend the night parties, bicycle rides, a dirt floor basement that had an unforgettable musty smell, and raking those big old nasty acorns that were large enough to leave a knot on your head (I had plenty) when they fell from the tree. We would burn those leaves and acorns and run like the dickens when the acorns started to explode.

All of my aunts, uncles, and cousins helped to mold me into the person that I am now.

Happy birthday, Aunt Maureen. I love you.
